SHAD IN THE HUDSON. - [from the Rochester (N. Y.) Union.]-The propagation of shad in the Hudson river has been prosecuted under the Commissioners of Fisheries this year with energy and success. The number of young shad brought forth and turned into the river may be counted by millions. The season has now closed. The temperature of the water has risen above eighty, and put an end to the hatching operations. The place selected for operations was Mull's Fishery, some ten miles below Albany. To that place the agents, employed with the requisite apparatus, repaired and encamped about the middle of May, and remained till the 6th of July. Owing to the increase of shad by the work of former years, there was less difficulty in obtaining the parent tish for prepagation. The catching of the shad and the manipulation is all done in the night, generally between the hours of 9 and 2. A large proportion of the shad taken were unripe or unfit for production. M. A. Green, who has given his personal attention to the operations at Mull's, reports that on the night of May 15 he caught forty shad, of which only three were ripe, and from these he took 60,000 spawn.

The temperature of the water ranged from 60 to 68 degrees. On the 20th he took seven ripe shad which produced 140,000 spawn. On several occasions over 300,000 spawn were taken in a single night. On the 5th of July, the water was above 80 degrees, and no shad were taken. Above 240,000 young shad were turned loose, and this closed the operations on the Hudson for the season. The total of spawn taken was 8,335,000, from which 7,823,000 shad were produced and turned into the river. Three years from this spring these shad will be large enough for market, and at that time the catch in the Hudson will be so large that shad will be sold at very low figures. Enough has been done in the way of shad culture on the Hudson in the past two seasons to make a marked difference in the yield in the two succeeding seasons. The practical results of fish culture may now be realized.
